

Densho Digital Repository
Japanese American Service Committee (JASC) and
Chicago Japanese American Historical Society (CJAHS)
Oral History Project Collection
Title: Kikuno Goi - Mitsuo Goi Interview
Narrators: Kikuno Goi, Mitsuo Goi
Interviewer: Anna Takada
Location:
Date: July 2, 2017
Densho ID: ddr-chi-1-1-5

<Begin Segment 5>

- MG2: 21:13 Mom, so when you were in Japan, you were in Hiroshima?
- KG: 21:16 Yeah.
- MG2: 21:17 So when, when you came to the United States, did the people you were with in Hiroshima, did they die in the bomb?
- KG: 21:24 Yeah, I think so. Some of them, because we lived in the country, you know. So that time, okay. But, uh, there was two girls no of them had a good heart you know. Someone in the village, parents died you know. And the brother had to war, uh Chinese and Japanese War. So two girls left at 13, 15 nobody wants to take care of them because of poor farmers, you know. So they always they take them in and then older, oldest one was 15 that, uh, when she became 18, she's going to, she wanted to go to the city to look for job. And there was when moved out of this place, but the younger one was 15 so she, when she began 18 she, she says she's gonna work with her, you know, sisters. But I think they died because of the bomb, you know. And uh, so you know, I mean move. They say, when do you want? I said, how many hours you have? I lose so much. You know, I was so much in the, I don't know, you know, sometime I dream as, I can't, I don't know which one is my house, you know, I lost. So I told my daughter Frances, that's not home for me anymore. I lose so much, ever since then, you know.

<End Segment 5> - Copyright © 2017 Japanese American Service Committee (JASC) and Chicago Japanese American Historical Society (CJAHS). All Rights Reserved.